Ukraine's DTEK Agrees on $85m Loan for Battery Storage Project

By Olesia Safronova

(Bloomberg) -- The US International Development Finance Corporation and Ukraine's biggest private energy company DTEK agreed to finance battery energy storage project in Ukraine, DTEK says in emailed statement.

- Loan is one of DFC's largest debt finance transactions for Ukraine and the largest for its energy sector since Russia's full-scale invasion
 - "This approval allows DTEK to deploy further capital into a pipeline of projects that will strengthen energy security in the years ahead," DTEK CEO Maxim Timchenko says in statement
